NEWBURGH EDITOR NOT IN FAVOR OF DOSING CHILDREN

The Newburgh News says editorially:

Meeting of the Middletown Physicians' Club was held the other day to discuss the administration of children of the city from one year upward of toxin-antitoxin for immunization from diphtheria. The members favor inoculation for all children. This matter is being passed by the State Department of Health. Perhaps in time legislation will be obtained making it compulsory for children to undergo inoculation against diphtheria, as well as vaccination against smallpox, to obtain admission to the public schools. Making laboratories and experiment stations out of the bodies of our boys and girls has long been an aim of political doctors in Albany. They will not be satisfied until there is a vaccination, inoculation or injection for every ailment the children are liable to. One of the latest schemes is the dosing of city water with iodine as an alleged preventive of goitre. The public pays dearly in impaired health for interference with and reversal of nature's laws by medicals who drum up trade for concerns which make a business of supplying vaccine and serums for dosing children.

Wilson's Death Halts Oil Probe

Fail to Appear Wednesday Before Committee Armed With New Authority—Then Stock Brokers.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, Feb. 4.—All official activities in the naval oil reserve leasing scandal came to a complete standstill today out of respect to the memory of Woodrow Wilson.

With congress merely meeting and adjourning almost immediately, the public lands committee could not obtain from the senate a readjustment of its authority to conduct investigation into the leasing of Elk Hills and Teapot Dome by Ex-Secretary Fall.

Senator Lenroot, chairman, announced, however, that the committee tomorrow would ask the senate to pass again the oil probing resolutions, on which Fall based his challenge not to testify further before the committee.

Pending approval of the resolutions by the senate, expected by unanimous vote, and the reappearance of Fall, probably Wednesday morning, the committee has decided not to hear other witnesses. Numerous stock brokers who are in Washington under subpoena, have been told their examination would be delayed until the committee had another "showdown" with Fall. The committee desires to learn from these stock brokers, representing leading Washington, New York and Cleveland houses, whether any governmental officials dealt in Sinclair stock previous to the leasing of Teapot Dome.

The only important overnight development was a letter which Thomas Watt Gregory, appointed, but later withdrawn, by President Coolidge as one of the government's special oil counsel, wrote to the president that while he declared his connection with the Doherty oil interests "makes it inappropriate for me to act as your counsel in this matter," Gregory said he had not understood that he "was accepting an appointment" when the president telephoned him in Austin, Texas, last Tuesday, "that he was to employ me in the investigation of the oil leases."

Gregory said that his employment with a group of oil companies of which Doherty's was one, had slipped his mind until the matter was called to his attention by Doherty's testimony and he refreshed his memory.

The appointments of Silas H. Strawn and Allee Pomerene, who was named to succeed Gregory, will be sent to the senate for confirmation within a day or two, the White House announced today.

If Fall again fails to answer questions the committee will begin contempt proceedings against him. It was learned today following a week end of conferences.

THIRTY DAYS' MOURNING FOR WOODROW WILSON

Flags were flying at half staff today on all the public and many of the private buildings in Kingston out of respect to the memory of Woodrow Wilson and in conformity with the proclamation of President Coolidge on Sunday calling for an official thirty day period of mourning in all departments of the Federal government.

Comment on Wilson's Death

Newspapers of all shade of political opinion today united in paying tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson. Extracts from editorials follow:

New York American.—"Though the Wilson policies have aroused unexampled partisanship both for and against him, friend and foe alike recognized the essential greatness of the man, a Christian gentleman, an American of unassailable ideals and motives."

New York World.—"By the death of Woodrow Wilson the greatest figure in world history that ever has arisen from American soil is removed from the scene of his labors."

New York Tribune.—"The figure of Woodrow Wilson in death stands in the nation the same intense emotions which surrounded him living. Every American salutes the passing of a great figure."

New York Times.—"A great light has gone out. Happily he (Mr. Wilson) did not die until he has seen the waves of personal animosity subside and until he knew that the kindest public feeling would accompany him to his grave."

New York Herald.—"Woodrow Wilson will take up many pages in American history. He was a man who did things. He was a man who reached out for new ideals."

New York Daily News.—"He (Mr. Wilson) tried to do something which is beyond the intelligence and wisdom of any man. He tried by word to correct all the ills of foreign statescraft, accumulated in centuries, sharpened by national instincts and animosities, in all lands, and he failed by act to correct any of them or to preserve the rights of the United States anywhere."

Wilson Funeral on Wednesday

Decision Is Against State Ceremony and Services Will Be Simply Conducted at 3:30 O'clock.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, Feb. 4.—Woodrow Wilson will be laid to rest as he has lived during the past three years—as a private citizen.

The funeral will be held Wednesday.

Announcement to this effect was made here at noon today by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, his physician and close personal friend, after consultation with members of the family.

They decided against a state funeral, such as many proposed immediately after his death Sunday, and plans that had been in the making for the body to lay in state in the rotunda of the capitol were abandoned.

It is understood the plans for private services were in accordance with the wishes of the former president.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Funeral services for Woodrow Wilson will be held privately at the residence at 1:30 p. m. It was announced here today by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the former president's physician and personal friend, after consultation with members of the family.

After the services in St. Paul, which will be attended only by members of the family and intimate friends, the body of the former president will be taken to Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, at 10:30 a. m. on Tuesday. At the Washington Cathedral the body will lie in state in the crypts until Wednesday morning.

At the funeral in St. Paul, which will be held at the residence of the Rev. John H. Taylor, pastor of the Cathedral, the Rev. Charles C. Van Hook, assisted by the Rev. John H. Taylor, will officiate. The Rev. John H. Taylor, who is the pastor of the Cathedral, will also officiate at the funeral in St. Paul. ## Europe Recalls His Greatness at Versailles and He is Universally Given Credit as One Whose Ideals Were of Highest and Who Stuck to Them, Win or Lose.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, Feb. 4.—In the calm peacefulness of death, Woodrow Wilson slept in his modest little brick house in St. Paul today while a reverent nation an inspired world passed silently by and laid on his doorstep belated tributes to his greatness.

Lotter In Death.

A commanding figure in life, America's great war time president became in death an even loftier, more towering symbol of the ideals for which he gave his life. And his passing from the stage of world affairs, on which he had so long played the leading role, called forth expressions of sorrow in such volume as never before witnessed.

From the far corners of the earth today came messengers to mourn his death. The simple slip of paper that bore the words of an European monarch lay side by side on the hall table with the single rose that was the mute offering of a plainly dressed woman whose identity was obscured by the tear stained veil that hid her face.

The world, no less than America, hastened to give to Woodrow Wilson in death that which had been denied in the latter days of his turbulent life—the sincere acknowledgment that when the Book of Time is closed his name will be seen to stand high among those of all time.

The World Condolences.

A message of sorrow and regard came from many places today, from London, where he declined to visit a king called him "Sir" instead of "Your Majesty," from Paris where he spent the most momentous days of his epochal life in retracing the map of the world; from Rome where he was first acclaimed with a fervor that was almost idolatrous, and then hated with a vehemence that amounted to obsession; from the Americas, whose closer kinship he sought to further; from the far off Philippines, whose independence he favored; from the Orient, in whose affairs he occasionally dipped with a strong, firm hand. Wherever the printed word is known and wherever the echoes of a great conflict penetrated, Woodrow Wilson was known and the acclaim that was sometimes denied him in life came to him today as he slept the last long sleep in the quiet street in the backwash of present day affairs.

In the national capitol and on public buildings everywhere the sorrow was expressed by flags whipping at half mast in the cold February sunshine. They will remain so for thirty days, the period of official mourning set aside by proclamation of President Coolidge.

Capitol Warfare Stilled. At the capitol itself, the sounds of conflict and bitter partisan strife that have marked recent weeks were stilled. Both houses of congress met and then adjourned out of respect to his memory, and there were expressions of tribute and of reverence from even those who in life had opposed him and blocked his policies with a persistence that had its root in profound dislike and distrust.

The manner in which the nation will observe his passing, even the place where he will finally be laid to rest were matters still undecided this morning.

Left to themselves the family of the former president would have his funeral services and his burial conducted as private affairs. He was and has been for three years, they said, a private citizen, a distinguished one, perhaps, but still a private citizen, who died in his own modest home in the bosom of his family.

But there are others, public officials and personal friends, who believed that Mr. Wilson should be accorded a funeral and burial consistent with the honors he won and the high place he won in the world during his eventful and epochal life.

William Howard Taft, whom he succeeded in the White House and now the venerable chief justice of the United States supreme court, is one of these. No sooner had he expressed his deep personal sorrow over Mr. Wilson's death than he urged members of the family to permit a state funeral.

"The world," said the chief justice, "I do not understand anything else."

The chief justice had many supporters, not only among those of Mr. Wilson's political faith, but among those of the opposite party, whose difference with Mr. Wilson were many and bitter during his life, but who under the levelling influence of death desire that there shall be proper and fitting national tribute to his services and his greatness.

Await McAdoo's.

The final decision, it was said, will not be made until members of the family have an opportunity to consult Mr. and Mrs. William McAdoo, the latter Mr. Wilson's daughter, who are now speeding eastward from California. The McAdoos are due in Chicago some time today and there it is hoped to consult them by long distance telephone.

Princeton Desires Honor.

Princeton University, where he was first professor and then president for so many years, and from whence he came like a flaming meteor into public life, would like to have him back, for burial on the campus grounds with other distinguished sons of Princeton.

Virginians would like to see his final resting place be in the soil that gave him birth—at Staunton, with its historical memories. One solution suggested today was to have the former president interred privately in Washington and then later under calmer circumstance have his remains removed to some place where fitting arrangements might be made to have his grave become a national shrine. That his final resting place will become a point for pilgrimages was no doubt of today, and this fact has to be taken into account in whatever arrangements ultimately are decided upon.

At the Wilson Home.

The emotional tenderness that was so marked about the Wilson home in St. Paul since the former president first fell seriously ill on Friday gave way today to comparative quietude. The curious and reverential hundreds who stood in daylight and in darkness in the street adjacent to the house had disappeared today.

The undertakers finished their necessary task, and there was only the tramping of messenger boys bringing messages to break the solitude of St. Paul. Occasional passers-by would halt for a few moments, glance curiously at the curtained house and then pass on. Sometimes they lifted their hats in involuntary tribute to the fallen leader who lay within.

Mrs. Wilson's Fortitude.

Mrs. Wilson bore up under the strain with remarkable fortitude. She had a period of near collapse immediately following the former president's death. She had been his constant nurse and companion for nine years, the last four of which he was a sufferer, and she had been his constant nurse and companion for nine years, the last four of which he was a sufferer, and she had been his constant nurse and companion for nine years, the last four of which he was a sufferer.

She was holding his thin hand in hers when the last gentle gasp told the watching physician that it was all over.

The final scene was simple, and its very simplicity made it more heart rending. On either side of the bed in the sick room, high on the third floor and overlooking the little garden where the former president liked to spend the sunny days with his blackthorn stick and his easy chair sat Mrs. Wilson, the wife and Miss Margaret Wilson, the daughter, each holding a hand that had clung the course of the world.

The End.

At the foot of the bed, his heavy eyes and haggard face filled with tears, stood Dr. Cary T. Grayson, whose personal and professional relationship with the man on the bed extended over many years and probably was closer than any other living man. Occasionally he moved around to the side and felt the weakening pulse. It grew fainter and fainter until at last it could not be discerned through the violet-like, transparent skin. So faint was the indication of life that its final actual departure could scarcely be determined.

"He was just a tired man, going to sleep," said Dr. Grayson.

IRWIN ATTORNEY FOR PAPER COMPANY RECEIVERS.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Utica, Feb. 4.—(Special)—Papers in the appointment of receivers for the United States Paper Manufacturing Corporation and the Durham Paper & Pulp Company have been filed in the United States court clerk's office here. These papers show that the Hon. Charles A. Marshall of New York city and the Hon. Clarence H. Knapp of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., have been appointed receivers of the companies mentioned. Orders in the proceedings on file show the selection by the federal court on the application of the receivers of the Hon. Roscoe Irwin as attorney for the receivers in each case.

The properties of the companies mentioned consist of large and extensive paper mills at different points in the east, and it is understood that these companies are connected with very large interests in the paper manufacturing world.

THE PARTY TABLE

"We're going to be for a party," said the flowers as they nudged each other and smiled in their pretty flower fashion.

Great Care Is Taken.

"To be sure, we are," they added. And sure enough! They were all most beautifully arranged and put on the center of a dining-room table. Oh, the flowers were arranged in so lovely a fashion, and some of the green ferns were put around the outside of the vase, and a flower was at each place on the table, too.

"I'm the best tablecloth," said the tablecloth to the flowers.

"I hope you notice me!"

"Of course I haven't real flowers but don't you think the linen flowers I have are quite lovely? If you look carefully you will be able to tell that I have a bit of the valley pattern."

"It's a handsome pattern, too."

"Very handsome," said the flowers. "And how beautifully you are done up. You have been used before, haven't you?"

"Oh yes," said the tablecloth. "But great care is taken about ironing the best tablecloth. A new tablecloth is too stiff—it is not cordial and it doesn't show an ease of manner which a best tablecloth does—one which has been used but which is unmistakably a best one."

"Yes, a best tablecloth has ease of manner and it is cordial. It shows it is at a party. It hopes everyone else will show that, too, and that no one will spill upon it, though, of course, a best tablecloth must once in awhile be ready to expect accidents."

"But a best tablecloth doesn't accept spots in the same way as an old one does. An old one doesn't seem to care. A spot on a best tablecloth looks as though it shouldn't be there at all."

"Oh yes, it is ashamed of itself in the presence of the best tablecloth!"

"But you must see the other members of the family. A pride to the tablecloth are these relatives."

"Yes, we match the tablecloth," the napkins said. "We, too, have a handsome bit of the valley pattern worked out upon us. We are big and magnificent, really party napkins."

"Did you notice that we'd been polished and that we shine and look our best?" inquired the silver candlesticks. "We're going to be lighted—that is, the candles within us are going to be lighted."

"And we're going to be used, of course, but we're all shined up in our best," said the silver pepper shakers and the silver salt cellars.

"Some creatures have different clothes for best and for every day," the silver pepper shakers went on, "but we don't bother with all that fussing."

"It would cause too much trouble. We'd have to have boxes for our clothes and trunks if we went away, and we'd have to have wardrobes and clothes hanger."

"Besides, what would a silver pepper shaker do dressed up in a dress?"

"We can't possibly imagine," grinned the flowers.

"It would never do," said the silver pepper shakers.

"No, we're good managers in that way. We don't have to fuss about clothes. We're just polished for best and we get a little tarnished looking when we're not dressed up."

"We're all dressed up in the same way," said the forks, and the spoons smiled.

"So are we!"

"And so are we," said the knives.

"We're out for the party," said the handsome china dinner set, and the coffee cups with the butterfly handles and the tall glasses all said:

"So are we! So are we! We all belong to the party table. We do, indeed!"

"For there was going to be a party and the dining-room table was all ready with its best things upon it, waiting for the guests to arrive—and it hoped that the guests would admire it, too!"

"And surely the table thought they would for certainly it was handsomely dressed for the party!"

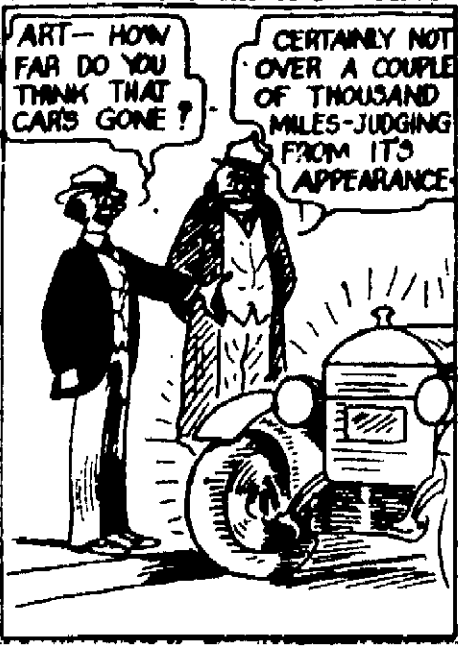

Paged.

"Robbie!" called his mother. The boy playing in the field nearby made no move.

"Robert!" The tone was sharper now and the youngster at the home-plate looked worried.

"Robert Jones!" That was enough. Flinging down the bat, Robbie grumbled to his playmates. "Aw fellows, I gotta go. Don't ya hear? I'm being paged!"—Boston Transcript.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union)

Ruckin says: First feed people then clothe and house people, then please them with art. The fundamental thing is to feed them. As armies travel on their stomachs, so an active brain must have a well-nourished body.

OUR DAILY FOOD

To begin the day a little reasonable fruit is always appropriate. Oranges, grapefruit and tangerines are plentiful. A dish of well-cooked cereal follows the fruit. Hot cakes with sausage, bacon or ham are always good foods to serve and well liked. Followed by a doughnut and coffee, one is sustained until the noon meal.

A good luncheon menu is hot cheese sandwiches, a simple lettuce salad, or a dish of radishes and green onions, baking powder biscuits with a little canned fruit and a few cookies for dessert.

If the main meal is served at night the luncheon should be quite simple, but nourishing.

For dinner one may have a steak, or a roast of some kind, a baked stuffed fish, tricedeased fowl, or baked ham—a few of the many good main dishes from which to choose.

With the stuffed fish serve hollandaise sauce with cauliflower, parsnips, potatoes, any fresh salad or sliced cucumbers, a caramel custard and coffee with small cakes.

With the broiled steak serve baked potatoes, creamed onions or buttered carrots and lettuce salad, with an ice cream served with a sauce, either maple or caramel, and coffee.

Spinach With Cream.—Wash three pounds of spinach and put to cook in a saucepan, cover without adding more water and cook, stirring occasionally; after twelve minutes put through a sieve, saving all the liquor; add four tablespoonfuls of butter, salt and pepper to taste and cook for fifteen minutes or until perfectly tender. Now add three tablespoonfuls of cream, mix well and serve piled on a hot platter with croutons for garnish, surrounding the spinach.

Chicken Purée.—Take the white meat from the breast of a chicken which has been roasted; add a tablespoonful of bread crumbs. Pound the bread and meat, mixing with a little of the broth to moisten, season to taste, heat and serve in small cups.

LESS TALKING WOULD
SHORTEN THE SESSION

Telegraph to The Freeman.
Albany, Feb. 4—Old time observations at the Capitol have come to the conclusion that the annual session of the State Legislature could be shortened by at least two weeks if the rule could be adopted in both houses preventing debates of more than ten minutes on bills that are of importance. In some instances, debates from one half to an hour have been wasted on bills which mean nothing and only help to clutter up the legislative record.

TO MEASURE THROUGH
ASSEMBLY IN 2 WEEKS

Telegraph to The Freeman.
Albany, Feb. 4—The automobile measure agreed upon by Governor Smith and the Republican leaders, calling for the licensing of the driver of every car, is expected to be passed in the Assembly within two weeks. The motor vehicle commissioner, to be created under the bill, will be vested with broad powers regarding the revocation of licenses. This, heretofore, has been vested only in the courts.

FOUR SEASON FOR
UPLIFTERS AT CAPITOL

Telegraph to The Freeman.
Albany, Feb. 4—Blue law advocates and uplifters in general might well keep away from the 1924 session of the State Legislature because their demands for legislation are to receive little, if any consideration, according to leaders of both the Republican and Democratic parties. During the last two sessions of the Legislature a futile effort was made to have the state regulate drinking.

ONE MAN'S WAY

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"NAN," Sir John Dyke proposed gently so as not to startle the lovely young girl sitting so confidently close to him in his big car. "I am far too old for you to consider as a husband? I want you to marry me very, very much."

A bright flush sprang into Nan's cheeks, and she turned her trustful blue eyes straight toward his own. "Oh, Sir John," she smiled softly, "you are offering me a great honor. I—I hardly know what to say. Your friendship for me, the hundred and one lovely little things you do for me, your constant care and thoughtfulness have been the sweetest attentions I have ever had." She gazed affectionately at him. "I hardly think any younger man could have a tenth of the understanding that you have, and that means so much in happy marriages."

"I feel sure I can make you far happier than some young, thoughtless cub who might continually be stalling your so sensitive spirit. I want you to spread your wings and grow big. I can help you wonderfully, Nan."

"It is only a reflection of your own brightness that you see in me," said Nan. When Sir John Dyke would have contradicted her she stopped him with a hand laid softly over his. "I will marry you," she said, "and try to become exactly what you want me to be."

Sir John, confused for a fleeting second by her swift consideration and answer, stooped swiftly and pressed his lips to each of Nan's pink palms. The contact sent an unexpected stab at his heart. Nan's eyes opened wide, her lips parted with a swift intake of breath.

A moment of tense silence followed, broken then by Sir John. His voice was not altogether steady. "You will not regret, my dear?" he questioned, and when she shook her head slowly, not trusting her voice, he added; and you will promise to tell me if anyone captures the more dominant type of love from you—before—well, before it is too late?"

"I promise to let you know," said Nan, with serious eyes. "If any other love capable of jeopardizing your happiness comes into my life. And I also want you to know that my answer to you now would be the same were you as poor as—as I am."

Sir John laughed. "Splendidly said, Nan. Now," he added more lightly, "shall we lunch, then drive down and have a ring fitted? I don't want a long engagement. May I send the announcement to the papers tonight?"

Later, when they stepped into the great jewelers on Fifth avenue, a dozen clerks would have gone forward to attend Sir John, but it was his nephew, learning the business from the counter up, who had that privilege.

"I have long wanted you to meet this nephew of mine, Nan," said Sir John, performing the introduction, and then watched the meeting of his fiancée and his handsome nephew. Their glances met and clung and their hands drew apart with a swift movement that sent a sharp pain through the heart of Sir John. Then Nan turned her startled, baffled glance upon him and he responded to the silent appeal.

Events piled up rather quickly after that first meeting. Sir John managed, first, with the selection of many wonderful bits of jewelry for Nan, to bring the two young people together. Then there were cozy dinners at his own glorious home on Park avenue. And though these intimate hours John watched something growing between Nan and his nephew. Their glances seldom met now, and Nan never permitted a moment alone with the younger man.

All three tried in true blue-blooded fashion to assume a calm exterior, while inwardly a bomb seemed ever ready to burst. The inevitable drawing together of dancing youth seemed imminent.

It was a scant two months since the engagement had been made public that Sir John, unable to stand the strain of suspense, withdrew from the drawing room after dinner and left the two together. He felt that it was only fair that they should be alone in order to come to a definite understanding. He took his pipe and his thoughts cut into the small space which he called his garden, and there in the quiet herded his emotions well into control that little Nan might not know of the ache that was already heralding the loss of her.

He had scarcely drawn the first draft of smoke from his pipe when he jumped up to encircle the slim, trembling girl who had flung herself into his arms.

"John, dear," she panted breathlessly, "please, please don't leave me so much with Jeff. He is beginning to think himself in love with me and I am trying so hard to ward it off. I love you so dearly that I can't bear to have any one else suffer."

"But Nan—Nan—surely you—" He was Sir John now who trembled. He had not supposed the world capable of offering so great a moment. And as the strong, protecting arms held her close and ever closer Nan realized the full grandeur of an understanding of love.

Scarfs Are Style
With Plaid Suits

Decoration Considered Necessary for Every Coat or Sweater.

Plaids and checks are having a great vogue in Paris, particularly in woollens, writes a Paris correspondent in the New York Tribune. Practically every important tailor and every Paris dressmaker who makes tailored suits is using plaids. Dresses with long capes are also being made of subdued tartans and other cross-bars and checks of intermingling tone.

It is quite the fashion to use monotoned plaids—that is to say, brown and beige, several shades of blue, likewise shades of green and tones of gray. The plaid is not always clearly defined, often being in the ombre and jaspe effects. Smart women reserve these plaids for traveling, informal morning wear and for sports clothes, but other women of less fastidious and less discriminating taste use the plaid suit for dress or for general wear.

All sorts of scarfs are worn with these plaid costumes. In fact, too much stress cannot be placed on the scarf as the complement to the fashionable toilette of today. In sports wear the scarf is of utmost importance. Every coat or sweater has its matching scarf whether knitted or made from a fabric. The separate scarf of brilliant-hued printed silk took all the autumn resorts by storm, and one feels sure from the preparation now in hand of beautiful novelties of this character that no costume on the Riviera this winter will be complete without a scarf.

Among the latest novelties in scarfs are those made of heavy crepe marocain, and are about two and one-half yards long and three-quarters of a yard wide. They are exquisitely embroidered in bold designs of high color. Some of them are oriental in effect and others are frankly conventional patterns.

The scarf as a component part of the fashionable costume is a dominant idea. Every important dressmaker is using the scarf in many forms, attached to or cut in one with the dress or coat with which it is worn.

Most of the new fur coats are finished with scarfs in preference to collars. Sometimes these are little more than cravats with tied ends; again they are huge and enveloping. Many tailored woolen dresses have fur scarf collars lined with the fabric of the dress. Often there is a scarf of the cloth bordered with fur.

Ornaments Are Worn on Dainty Evening Shoes

Evening shoes were never more attractive than are the present styles, and the buckles and ornaments with which they are trimmed are as pretty as the jewels worn at the throat and in the coiffure. For satin slippers are rhinestone buckles in great variety of designs—butterflies, bluebirds, cornets, fleur de lis and stars. Some of the most chic shoes are trimmed with a chain of tulle or gold or silver gauze held with a tiny jeweled button.

An extravagant French model has for its ornament a pompon of ostrich feather, so like the trimming on boudoir slippers and mules that the styles are not easily separated.

Shoe buttons must not be visible, according to the present-day mode. Therefore there are still gold slides that cover the strap of a slipper and fasten with a jeweled medallion at the side.

Two Coats Accompany
New Black Velvet Frock

Jenny uses much black with brilliant colors in her ensembles. She shows an interesting use of two different coats for the one dress in a model called Chapon Rouge. This is a black velvet dress trimmed with a brilliant red metal moire and red and gold embroideries. One coat is of black velvet and the other of the red metal cloth. By changing the coat the costume is immediately transformed from simple to dressy.

Jean Paton's most successful ensemble de soir has been named "O'Rouge." It consists of a dress and cape of copper-colored salamba, which is moiré. The dress is trimmed with three tiers of copper fringe and the cape has a beautiful sable collar and band around the bottom.

This very attractive sports suit for early spring wear is made up of a smart brown mixture.

Fluffy and Clinging
Types of Dress Used

While the natural outline of figure remains popular, there will be some who prefer the fluffy to the clinging type of dress, even in ball gowns, says a fashion writer in the New York Times. Sometimes the gown seems to decide the style of dancing. The woman who waltzes the really truly waltz looks best in a frilly frock. She that does the tango will doubtless feel inspiration from the ruffled gown, and it must be said that some of these are entrancing.

A prominent New York house is having great success with a beaded gown, all crystal and sea-green beads, embroidered upon a net foundation with sufficient breadth of line to permit freedom of movement; a gown quite different from the ridiculous sheath garment of a few seasons ago.

All-let beaded gowns are less common than they once were, only a few really smart models being shown. Crystal is exceedingly popular, and some lovely dance frocks are seen in crystal opalescent beads upon crepe chiffon, with a narrow crystal fringe edging the bottom of the skirt, which is cut to the ankle.

The tendency is to delicacy and artistic beauty, and the diversity of designs provides for many individual preferences.

Pett point is the fad of the hour, and is introduced in miniature on many of the accessories of both evening and daytime dress. One dainty trifle is a tiny suede bag that holds a little powder puff and a lipstick encased in metal. On one side is an entree-deux in petit point of flowers. The top of the bag is cut in a fringe and closes with a drawstring.

Imitation Furs Craze
With Women of Paris

What the Parisian woman seems to want is a quantity of fur. If she can afford the costly pelt she has it; if not, she is satisfied with a substitute of all varying degrees of cheapness, according to the amount she wishes to spend. Even the most fastidious women seem to be content to wear rabbit or any other cheap substitute for a costly fur because it is the fashion. This craze for cheap furs applies particularly to their use in broad bands and not so much to an entire fur garment.

Never has there been a greater vogue for these cheap or imitation furs. The Paris dressmaker does not hesitate to make use of the pelts of the most domesticated animals, and the semi-savage beast comes in for a big share of attention from fur buyers.

There is a new kind of rabbit fur called lapin ombre, made from the ordinary bunny hide but treated so skillfully that it has almost the beauty of sable and is exactly the dark sable color. The opossum is another fur changed, as it were, into lynx through a special dye and treatment given.

Antelope hide is one of the popular flat furs. Krimmer is a de luxe article. Likewise curled Persian lamb and caracul are greatly in demand. Ermine is used or mounted like a lingerie finish, and, of course, there are the ermine imitations such as white rabbit and alley cat.

KINGSTON, N. Y., FEB. 4, 1924.

The popularity of the Mellon tax reduction plan, irrespective of party, is indicated by the fact that both John W. Davis and Martin W. Littleton, prominent Democrats, are outspoken in its favor.

If all the crooks and bandits have not already left Philadelphia—for a season—they are likely to consider the matter now that General Butler proposes a fleet of armored, 75-mile-an-hour motor cars to chase them with.

At least one journalist has come forward to remind ex-Secretary Fall et al that "the love of money is the root of all evil," but the average get-rich-quick operator is not likely to be interested in moral precepts either before or after too great publicity.

A "Congressman who divides his time between the House of Representatives and his retail shoe store" is quoted as saying that a change of styles doubles sales. Of course. That is why the styles are changed just as often as the American public—the most patient and submissive of all publics—can be counted on to permit.

The news comes from Chicago that across 2,000 miles of space listeners in heard the heart beats of an operator who held against his chest a microphone attached to a radio transmitting set. If Romeo and his Juliet could only have worked that trick their woes would have been fewer and their misunderstandings none.

READY FOR THE "EXPLOSION."

Just as they did in 1914 before the outbreak of the last great war, many Americans now listen with even more skepticism than indifference to the warnings that another European explosion is not far off. They'll think better of it, and even if they are crazy enough not to, we are safely hooked to keep out of it. It seems to be the average American thought in this connection, where the matter is given any thought at all. In Europe, on the other hand, such a prospect appears not only to be taken seriously but in some quarters another explosion seems almost to be even desired. There are Italians, for example, who appear to think that in Mussolini they have the great man of the hour, whatever the nature of the crisis, and like the Germans of 1914 who wanted to see their great army machine have a try out, would like to see their hero (Mussolini) have his great opportunity. The following suggestive utterance is from Rassegna Italiana, said to be a "first weight" Italian publication:

Europe is living today in an epoch that demands readiness for action. Informed intelligence, prepared hearts and minds intent on the imminent and inexorable crisis. The most tremendous events of our epoch have perchance not yet occurred. National passion, imperial aspiration, inflexible resistance, are paving the way for them. When a nation is on the eve of its supreme hour, Providence often sends it a genius who takes its destinies in his strong hand and in its name throws down the gauntlet of battle. The appearance of a great national and political genius like Benito Mussolini in these critical times is not a mere accident.

WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

A very important matter is overlooked by the "equal rights" enthusiasts who would have young women enter every avenue of employment open to men—the simple biological fact that the average woman is lacking in the average man's physical strength and powers of endurance. While the man usually continues his work to old age, the woman too often drops out because of broken health in a few years. In this connection a warning has been issued by two officials of the United States Department of Labor. "No matter how much we shout about 'equal rights,'" says Miss Mary Anderson, of the women's branch of that department, "we must admit there is a physical difference between man and woman, and a woman cannot compete with a man without suffering the consequences. Thousands are breaking down every year nervous wrecks. A woman cannot stand the strain of business hustle and hustle as well as a man. As a result thousands of young women are broken in health each year by trying to keep pace with men and—dearest pity of all—are made unfit to enter into the duties of wife and mother."

Dr. E. E. Turner, of the branch of industrial diseases in the Department of Labor, attributes the breakdown of girls in business less to an effort beyond their strength than to their dress, nerve-sapping pleasures and neglect of health. "What sort of mothers," he asks, "are we going to produce in America from these run-down sickly girls—girls who starve themselves at lunch time to save money with which to buy silk stockings and fur coats?" Neither of the officials quoted seems to know what is to be done about it, and their warning will reach and usefully influence but few. Already 8,500,000 women are employed outside of the home in this country and this great number will grow as time goes on. Though some young women "go out to work" for excitement or an "interest," in these times the great majority do so from necessity. All of them would be wise to think more of preserving their health than of ambition, achievement.

WHY TARTAR SHOULD BE REMOVED FROM THE TEETH.

Perhaps you are of the opinion that the tartar on the teeth is harmless. You have seen it on the teeth of many people, perhaps members of your own family and relatives.

They seemed to enjoy their health. True they had all their teeth removed early in life and were wearing plates, but they were still alive. What's a little tartar?

Now it is this little tartar—this hard bony scale made up from salts taken from the blood—that forms around the margin of the gum where the tooth enters, and actually sets up an irritation.

This irritation starts a mild inflammation, which later becomes a severe inflammation, and soon you have a well developed case of pyorrhea, or flow of pus from the gums—a serious condition.

There is first a tenderness of the gums and they bleed very easily; the ordinary light brushing with a tooth brush being sufficient to cause considerable bleeding. Then around the margin of the gum will appear little white or gray patches. These break down and it is thought that infection goes into the root of the tooth in this manner. The teeth often become loose in their sockets.

There is a controversy amongst physicians as to whether some general condition of the body causes the pyorrhea, or whether the pyorrhea causes trouble in other parts of the body.

That it has increased enormously in the last few years is admitted, but the real cause has not been found. That the food is not chewed sufficiently, thus sending food unprepared into the stomach is thought to be one cause.

However it is felt that if we were to chew our food more thoroughly, we would exercise the teeth and jaws and surrounding parts, would thus have a better supply of blood coming to the mouth, and a more thorough removal of wastes. Again a place where activity is health—is life.

However the tartar has started—the first stage. Go to your dentist and have it removed. He will likewise scrape the surrounding tissues, clean and give the gums a fresh start.

Some dentists actually advise the scrubbing of the gums with a brush just as you do the teeth. This stimulates the circulation and prevents the return of tartar.

Fewer Cows in New York State

Number Shrinks 28,000 in Year While Corn Belt States Report Increase in Dairy Animals.

The number of milk cows in this state is 28,000 less the number at this time last year, according to the estimates prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture and the New York State Department of Farms and Markets. The official estimate is 1,469,000 milk cows and heifers two years old or older on the farms January 1. A year ago the number was 1,497,000. Reduction in the number of cows, which amounts to about 2 per cent, has been due to several causes, but chiefly to the recent drop in the price of milk, the very short pastures during the latter part of the summer which materially increased the cost of producing milk, the high cost of farm labor, and the campaign against tuberculosis, which caused nearly 50,000 cattle to be condemned for slaughter in this state during 1923.

The number of rearing heifers on the farms in this state is also at the lowest point in years. The number being estimated at 225,000, compared with 250,000 a year ago. The chief cause of the reduction is the very low price of milk which prevailed in the spring of 1923. This so discouraged dairy farmers at that time that they did not raise enough calves. In the spring of 1923 the price of milk was much more encouraging and about the usual number of calves were raised.

The reduction of the number of milk cows in this state is in rather sharp contrast to the changes in the corn belt states. The total number of all cattle is slightly less than a year ago but the low price of beef as compared with dairy products has resulted in there being an increased number of dairy cows and heifers in all the beef producing states north of the Ohio river and west of Pennsylvania. In the New England States and in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland, taken together, the number of cows and heifers is almost exactly the same as it was a year ago. Putting the situation in another way, there has been a slight increase in the number of cows in the states which produce chiefly butter and cheese, but practically no change, except in this state, in the sections which ship milk to the big cities of the east. The total increase in milk cows and heifers in the country as a whole is only 238,000 head, or approximately one per cent. This is less than the normal increase in population.

The popularity of dairy cows compared with beef cattle is also shown by the increase in the average value of milk cows in the United States from $50.83 per head a year ago to $52.16 per head on January 1 of this year. During the same period the price of beef cattle showed a slight decline.

The number of horses on the farms of this state has declined from 510,000 a year ago to 505,000 this year. Most of the decrease is due to the increased use of motor vehicles and tractors, to the employment of a smaller number of hired men, and to the raising of a smaller number of colts.

The number of sheep in the state has increased from 52,000 a year ago to 543,000 this year. This is probably a temporary increase due to the present high price of wool. There has also been a slight increase in the number of hogs on the farms of the state, the number January 1 being estimated at 557,000, compared with 546,000 a year ago. This also is probably a temporary increase.

Definite figures regarding the number of chickens on the farms are not available but the number seems to be about seven per cent greater than it was a year ago.

TO MOVE ON APRIL 1
Into Its New and Modern Quarters at 239 Fair Street.

The Spencer's Business and Stenographic School is planning to move into its new home, the new up town Freeman building, 239 Fair street, opposite the surrogate's office, on April first.

This building is being constructed especially for the Freeman Publishing Company and Spencer's Business School, and will be modern in every particular. The two upper floors, which will be occupied by the school, will be the last word in business college construction, and will be the permanent home of an old, reliable business college. Large numbers of solid oak tables and other school furniture have been ordered especially from Gregory and Company of this city, and when furnished, Spencer's will be one of the best equipped business schools in the state. The class rooms and study halls are arranged to meet the needs of one of Kingston's most progressive institutions.

AMERICA NOT INDIFFERENT

By FRANCIS H. SISON,
Chairman, Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

While the facts justify the belief that the financial and general economic strength of the United States is so great that it creates a stability here which cannot be seriously shaken by the adverse conditions in Europe, it still remains true that an attitude of indifference to these distressing conditions is unworthy of the American people. In fact, I believe that such indifference does not exist. The nation is observing with deep interest the progress of events abroad and has given many evidences of a readiness to aid in restoring normal conditions wherever it is seen that a suitable opportunity is afforded.

Our people have naturally been reluctant to act while the European nations still fail to display the will to accept the only terms on which rehabilitation is possible, and to abandon their mutual hatreds and distractions for further warfare, and their destructive political and financial policies. Such policies have so weakened the credit of some of the continental nations that the task of aiding them seems futile until it is clear that these policies are discredited and abandoned by them.

Although it seems clear from the record of recent years that America, more perhaps than any other country, has been and will continue to be able to adjust itself without serious disaster to the conditions created by European depression, and has in its own vast domestic market and in other non-European markets an outlet for its products adequate to maintain a fair degree of national prosperity, the fact remains that it is very definitely to the selfish interests of the United States to have Great Britain and the European continental countries regain their normal prosperity at the earliest possible date. They normally absorbed between 60 and 70 per cent of American exports, but recently have been taking less than 50 per cent.

Moreover, the rich contribution which Europe has made in the past to the upbuilding of other parts of the world, including the United States, would seem to create a genuine obligation upon other countries to come to its aid in the present period of difficulty. General well-being throughout the entire world will be diminished to a degree as long as Europe is unable to play its part in production and consumption of valuable products. It possesses vast resources of skill and equipment for the production of useful commodities in demand by all nations, and loss continues while these resources are limited in their use by poverty and by adverse political and social conditions.

That the share of the United States in this loss is relatively small should not preclude an active interest in every promising effort that may be made to restore the European nations to economic and financial health.

For Community Betterment

The Committee on Agriculture of the Missouri State Bankers Association has sent out a questionnaire to all members to secure a frank opinion as to what are the most important community problems to be solved in the state. The questionnaire covers bank deposits, crops, schools, manufacturing, roads, junior club work, agricultural agencies, co-operative agencies, farm abandonment, land values, finances, dairying, and social life, with a view in determining what work should be undertaken for the year.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUT COURAGE WINS FAITH

Courage and discipline displayed in a terrific flood which engulfed an entire camp in a Utah canyon were the basis for expressions of faith by parents, scout council, and local clubmen in the boy scout movement which, in a tragic experience, had proved to them its value in the development of manly qualities. On the eventful evening, eight boys of the Ogden Gateway council, Utah, under the leadership of Field Executive George Bergstrom, were snugly housed from the rain in one of the tents when there came a sudden lull, and quiet, followed by a rush, a roar, a thundering crash, a sound like the roaring of a tremendous wind, and then the flood. A wall of water and debris eight feet high swept upon the tent, throwing the occupants into a vortex of swirling water amid tent cots, bed sacks, tent ropes, poles, and equipment, and carrying them in its icy grip for several hundred feet over rocks, brush and undergrowth.

"I suddenly felt a dash of rain in my face and found myself clinging to a chokecherry bush in more than five feet of water, a raging torrent on both sides," says the scout leader. Calling to his boys, the scout man at the same time groped around for them, his pathway illuminated only by lightning flashes. After considerable difficulty the little band was united and the problem was to reach higher ground. Joining hands, and placing the younger boys in the more guarded positions, the sturdy team slowly made its way through the angry stream, finally reaching the scoutmaster's automobile standing some distance beyond.

A fire was essential for the bedraggled group. With some dry straw discovered in a ripped-open mattress and dry wood from some dead cottonwood trees, secured by peeling off the wet bark, a little mound of timber was formed. Taking off the cover of the gas tank, Bergstrom stuck in a rag which he had fastened on a stick and saturated it with gasoline. Putting on the cover to prevent an explosion, he hastened to the motor, and grasping the high-tension cable firmly, severed its connection at the high-tension spark coil. Into the sparks that jumped across the gap, he shoved the rag. He received a half-paralyzing shock, but his reward was a flame which, when applied to the wood, soon reached a blaze, amid the cheers of the boys.

In the morning the party found food and shelter in a neighboring farmhouse.

BOY SCOUTS AVERT TRAGEDY

The claim that scout training develops initiative and clear thinking has a convincing example in a recent thrilling rescue by three boy scouts of Atlanta, Georgia, and a companion. A terror-stricken girl suspended thirty feet above a ravine, in a buoy strung on a cable—such were the melodramatic circumstances which accompanied the rescue.

These young people were playing at a recreation park where a long cable had been stretched across the rear of the property, for the amusement of the children of the neighborhood. Along this cable, clinging to the breeches buoy, the children are in the habit of swinging themselves. As a rule the weight of the average boy or girl is sufficient to carry him or her from one end of the cable to the other.

"But little Mary Brown, nine-years-old, couldn't quite make it," it was explained. "It was her turn on the buoy and she made a valiant effort, but as she reached a point directly over a small ravine, where the cable is thirty feet from the ground, her momentum was exhausted and she found herself suspended in midair without any apparent means of regaining the earth safely."

"Seeing the child's danger the scouts and their friend ran to the little girl who was clinging tightly to the buoy and screaming with fright. The resourceful lads, looking about for means of freeing Mary, discovered a short distance away an old rug. They rushed back to the ravine with it, and holding it as firm as a net, they ordered her to make the jump. Game! Mary released the buoy and plunged into the outstretched rug, unhurt."

Boy Scouts of Atlanta, the account recalls, have figured during the past year in seven distinct rescues in which their lives were imperiled to save others.

A GOOD TURN BY THE WAY

A highway near Seattle, Wash., was recently the scene of the scout "daily good turn." While passing along the countryside two members of Troop 2, Seattle, noticed flames issuing from the upper story of a farmhouse. Hastening to the fire area, they found the householder and his wife the sole and pathetic witnesses of the impending ruin. Following the scout principle, "to help other people at all times," the scout carried out most of the furniture before the roof collapsed.

LARGE INCREASE IN WATERFOWL IN U. S.

Maps Show Breeding and Wintering Grounds.

Washington.—The United States bureau of biological survey has prepared a series of maps showing the breeding and wintering ranges of six species of waterfowl most popular with gunners. These maps also show certain areas which are classed as both breeding and wintering territory. The mallard perhaps exceeds all other birds in popularity with the bulk of the gunners of the country. It is the opinion of most duck shooters that in numbers the mallard exceeds all other species, and during heavy mallard migrations it would seem that there were more mallards than all the rest of the ducks put together. The American Game Protective association points out in a recent bulletin that this is not true, as anyone who has seen a heavy pintail or blue-bill flight will testify. The bulletin says:

"The wintering area of the Canada goose is even less in proportion to its breeding area than that of the mallard, but we doubt if the strain on the wintering grounds is nearly as severe, because in numbers this goose can in no way be compared with the mallard. It must also be borne in mind that the Canada goose will not rest where it is frequently disturbed by man. Since the passage of the law stopping spring shooting, mallards and other ducks have shown conclusively that if let alone they will again occupy much of the area which was their breeding ground in former days. The Gulf coast states, the coast sections of Georgia and the Carolinas and the Pacific coast country of California, Washington and Oregon compose the wintering section of the pintails of our country, many of these preferring to go into Mexico, Cuba and Central America."

Migration Puzzled Hunters.
"The migrations of these ducks have puzzled gunners since time immemorial. In the late winter and early spring literally millions of these birds go up the Mississippi and Missouri valleys from their winter home to their breeding ground."

"The only map of this series in which the wintering area equals that of the breeding territory is in the case of the blue-wing teal, which not only spreads out over Mexico and Central America but goes on into South America."

"Many men prefer the canvassback to any other duck as a shooting proposition, and perhaps it is the consensus of opinion that as a table bird he ranks at the head of the list. How many men who have enjoyed shooting these birds along the Virginia and Carolina coasts have realized that their favorite game bird comes from the Northwest and that their sport depends upon the care that is taken of this bird not only on its breeding grounds but during its migration across the country? The canvassback, instead of making a north and south migration, travels from the northwest to the southeast and back again."

"Some time ago we solicited the support of an influential man in the interests of the public shooting ground-game refuge bill, and were told by him that he was not interested in the conservation of wild fowl anywhere except on his Southern preserve. He stated that he shot principally canvassback and that he had good shooting, and that he enjoyed good sport because out of his own pocket he employed wardens to patrol his property and keep all gunners off; that he had spent enormous sums in providing food for the birds and that it was because of these facts and not through any conservation work which might be done anywhere that he had waterfowl to shoot on his Southern estate."

Federal Law Necessary.
"We would like this gentleman to study the canvassback map carefully. All he does at his Southern shooting reserve is to congregate the birds in that vicinity. Unrestricted slaughter goes on in the Northwest during the breeding season, and this man's shooting will suffer, no matter how many thousands of dollars he spends in supplying duck food for the birds and guards to protect him against trespass."

"The passage of a federal law to protect migratory game birds was necessary because no state could protect any species of bird that sojourne within its borders for only a short time. For obvious reasons the different states did not co-operate with each other, and it is believed that had not a federal law been enacted many species of migratory game birds would be extinct today."

"Since the federal government has been given jurisdiction over these birds they have increased wonderfully. But in order that seasons, bag limits and other regulations may be made judiciously and the birds given effective protection, the federal government must learn all possible as to their journeys back and forth across the country. The banding of migratory waterfowl has already done much to trace the courses our ducks take when traveling in search of food or suitable climates. Each year that numbers of ducks are banded more will be added to the knowledge of man, and more adequate will be the protection he can offer his feathered friends."

"The work the United States bureau of biological survey is doing in investigating the habits of the migratory birds is of inestimable value to the gunners of the country; in order that the conservation work can be carried on in an intelligent manner."

Advice to Young Men.

"A person who cannot succeed without being in a herd ought to organize his own herd. My advice to a young man is to learn to pitch in and fight his battles single-handed. Sheep and goats run in droves, but lions and tigers do not."—E. W. Howe.

AGRICULTURAL AID

By JOHN T. ADAMS,

Chairman of the Republican National Committee

The advertisement which agriculture is to lend every assistance to farming and livestock interests. To carry out this policy, the Republican party has in the last three years enacted more fundamental, constructive legislation in behalf of farming interests than was enacted in any previous decade of the nation's history.

Further readjustments to relieve some phases of agriculture are necessary. They are now being worked out by President Coolidge and his administration, with the assistance of Republican leaders in both branches of Congress. Representatives of agricultural sections still needing relief are being called into conference with Republican administration officials for the purpose of formulating a practical program.

Agricultural interests realize that in every crisis conditions have been straightened out by the sound, progressive policies of the Republican party, rather than by the adoption of untried and uneconomic theories. The Republican party and the Republican administration can be depended upon at this time to solve the serious problems which vitally concern the farming and livestock interests of the country.

George Greel, Franklin K. McAdoo, T. G. McAdoo and Theo. Gregory.

Verifying before a Senatorial investigating committee, E. L. Doheny, millionaire oil magnate, who loaned Albert B. Fall $100,000, swore he had retained William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury; Franklin K. Lane, former Secretary of the Interior; Thomas W. Gregory, former Attorney General, and George Greel, so-called publicity agent of the Wilson Administration, after they had left their Government positions. Now as then, he said, had any connection whatever with the Government when he employed them. Mr. Gregory had been selected by President Coolidge to investigate oil land leases, but this testimony caused the withdrawal of his name.

Ulster Dist. 6 Can Build School

Unless Opponents Are More Successful Elsewhere Than With Graves Who Refuses to Set Aside Scheme for $37,000 Structure.

A $37,000 school house can be erected near the present site of the school in District No. 6, town of Ulster, which is near the top of the hill leading to East Kingston, as the voters favored at a special district meeting held November 7, 1923, at which was adopted a resolution ratifying and confirming action taken at a special meeting held June 16, 1922, when the sum of $29,000 was appropriated for the erection of a new school building, and also adopted a second resolution providing for an additional $17,000 to be raised. From this action by the voters of School District No. 6, a number of taxpayers took an appeal to Frank P. Graves, state commissioner of education on various grounds, through Everett Fowler, their attorney, which was opposed by Van Etton & Cook, attorneys for the school district trustees, respondents. Commissioner Graves has just handed down his decision in the matter in which he states that not sufficient facts were presented to justify him in setting aside the action of the special district meeting on November 7, 1923.

The opinion of Commissioner Graves which follows, gives all the facts of the matter:

This appeal is from the action of a special district meeting held in District No. 6 of the town of Ulster, November 7, 1923, at which two resolutions were adopted: the first, ratifying and confirming the action taken at a special district meeting held June 16, 1922, at which the sum of $29,000 was appropriated for the erection of a new school building; the second, providing for an additional appropriation of $17,000, which, together with the above sum of $29,000, shall be raised by tax upon the taxable property of the district, to be collected in twenty annual installments of $850 each as provided in section 467 of the Education Law.

The appellants state that the appeal is taken upon the ground "that the proposed school house which the said trustees intend to erect with the money appropriated at said meeting will not take care of the wants of the school district, that said building will not be located in a convenient place for at least half of the children that attend said district school, that the undersigned desire to submit a proposition to the commissioner of education whereby the same can be built at a less expense than the proposed building and that it will accommodate all the children to better advantage."

It will be noticed at the outset that no objections are raised as to the legality of the special district meeting or the action taken thereat.

The substance of the appellants' complaint is that the proposed location of the school building will cause hardship to a considerable number of the children who live near the brickyard located in the eastern portion of the district. It appears that there are about 147 children registered in the school that is now being maintained and that a considerable number, variously estimated at from 50 to 70, are required to travel a distance of from 1 1/4 to 2 miles to attend the present school. The site upon which the new schoolhouse is proposed to be erected is about 500 feet from the present school site. It was conveyed to the district on October 13, 1922, by purchase having been authorized by a special district meeting which committee of three persons who had been appointed at a prior district meeting to investigate the matter of the proposed site and to report to the meeting. Two of the members of such committee are appellants in this proceeding and apparently reported favorably upon the site selected. No appeal was ever taken from the action of the district meeting authorizing the purchase of such site.

The appellants insist that there should be two school buildings maintained in the district: one to be erected near the brickyard and the present school building to be repaired and continued in operation. Certain of the appellants have offered to give the district a site near the brickyard and to contribute all the brick necessary for the construction of a building if erected on such site, also to provide fuel for the heating of such building. They contend that such an arrangement will accommodate the children residing on and near the brickyard who would otherwise be required to travel distances up to two miles in attending school and that the children living in other portions of the district will be accommodated at the school building that is now maintained.

The trustees have answered the appeal and in connection with their answer have submitted affidavits of other residents of the district and of the district superintendent of schools which tend to show that 95 of the 147 children who are registered can more conveniently attend a school located on the site proposed by the appellants at "Goldrick's Landing." The respondents insist that the latter proposed site is not a suitable place for the erection of a school building because of the surrounding conditions. They show that the section is populated by the employees of the brick companies, being a mobile population in which the moral conditions would not tend to create a proper school atmosphere. The respondents also insist that notwithstanding the offer of the school lot together with certain building materials and free fuel, the proposition for two schools, if adopted, would result eventually in an increase in the cost of school maintenance since additional teachers would necessarily be employed if the proper grading of the schools were maintained. They show that the operation of a single school of the district for the accommodation of the children not exceeding 150 in number is both more economical and more efficient.

Certain questions have been raised with respect to conditions that were attached to the deed of the two acres of land purchased by the district for the school site. The deed carries with it the right to use the water from an adjacent spring. This right, however, is not exclusive since permission to use water from such spring was reserved in a deed given by a former grantor who also reserved the right to construct a dam across the small brook and thereby flood the adjacent lands including this property. The trustees insist that the right reserved in the former deed to flood the property would not affect the school property because of its elevation. It has not been established to my satisfaction that the property so purchased by the district is not healthful in any respect or that its location would work a serious hardship to the children. The present school building has been in use for 75 years or more and the proposed new building will be located near the present site. It has never been held that the action of the voters in selecting a school site will be set aside except upon proof that the site selected is unsanitary or unsuitable for school purposes or that it works a serious hardship to a considerable number of the children residing in the district.

The appellants pray "that the proposed new building be abandoned and that the present school building be remodeled and that a new additional building be built along the river road in the eastern part of said district which will take care of and provide for the wants of all the children." The prayer of the petitioners might properly be addressed to the discretion of the voters assembled at a district meeting but as the law now stands it does not rest with the commissioner of education to select school sites or to regulate the action of district meetings in authorizing the erection of school buildings in the absence of evidence that the action taken was illegal or that the site or sites selected are unsanitary or are otherwise detrimental to the best interests of the children to be served. It has never been held that the commissioner may arbitrarily substitute his judgment as to the location of a school building for the judgment of the voters of the district as expressed at the district meeting. It may be that his opinion might not always coincide with that expressed by the voters but the law gives to the voters the right to choose the site and their discretion, when lawfully exercised, may not be lightly set aside.

After a full and careful consideration of this case I am convinced that there are not sufficient facts presented that would justify me in setting aside the action of the special district meeting held November 7, 1923. There is immediate necessity for improved school facilities in this district. The voters have expressed their preference in selecting a school site that has been purchased and paid for by the district and the voters have also appropriated moneys necessary for the erection of a proper school building. The trustee should proceed without further delay to carry out the wishes of the voters as so expressed.

The appeal is dismissed.

THE SYRACUSE RESOLUTION AGAINST RURAL SCHOOL BILL

About 200 rural residents gathered in the assembly hall of the Cawthorne in Syracuse on Thursday, January 31, to take state action on the Porter bill now before the legislature, those present being mostly working farmers with a good sprinkling of teachers and district superintendents of schools. A remarkable business-like atmosphere obtained throughout the morning and afternoon sessions which were brought to a close at 5:50 with much business still on hand. A majority of those present had come from 100 to 200 miles at their own expense. The mayor was to have spoken but was prevented and sent a representative who welcomed the visitors to the city on his behalf and gave an interesting address.

The chief speaker was H. W. Collingwood, editor of the Rural New Yorker, who received an ovation from the audience as soon as he appeared, was listened to with rapt attention all through and given hearty and continued applause at the close. The Ulster county representative introduced a resolution which was loudly cheered, copies of which were in great demand by most of those present, who wanted one to take home for their local paper.

The resolution which was passed unanimously, was as follows: Whereas, we are confronted with the complete breakdown of our public school system in that instead of giving us educated people we have the cigarette smoking flapper, the jazz loving joy riding youth to whom labor in any shape is nauseous, and

Whereas, we are also confronted with a demand on the part of our professional educationists for more power, and more money to enable them to bring these blessings into the rural districts, and

Whereas, this means the wiping out of our rural school system, which has proved itself for over 100 years the very backbone of the nation, surviving without scandal as an institution practically every other organized human activity, and

Whereas, we are still close enough to the soil to know that some one must work it all are to live and being willing to do our part in the future as we have in the past, therefore

Resolved, that we working farmers and rural residents of the state of New York hereby protest against any change in our rural schools as contemplated in the bill now before the legislature and pledge ourselves to do all in our power to prevent it becoming law, and further

Resolved, that we cannot sufficiently condemn the activities of those who are trying to put this scheme over on us, and draw their attention to the dire necessity of setting their own house in order before tinkering with ours.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

(BY ELEANOR GUNN.)

The scarf idea featured in the several sketches presented, is a dress feature of continued importance, while the decorative scarf seems most adaptable to the sports frock. It is repeatedly shown in costume effect with tailored cloth models and is generously introduced in the daintiest evening gowns.

The simplicity of the mode is undeniable and even in collections of gowns that have always been known for their picturesque appeal, a decided trend toward the practical and wearable is manifested.

The fashion for light colored cloth dresses seems to be generally accepted and women's as well as misses' styles are favored in such shades as mocha, moss green, gray and beige.

Fine colored stitcheries of the tapestry variety are repeatedly shown in street dresses of black satin and dark colored flat crepes, and often brilliantly colored. They are small of design and conservatively placed.

Bengaline is gaining in prominence and is shown in three-piece dresses of mature designing as well as in high colors and styles suited to the very youthful.

Silk alpaca invariably is treated in semi-sports fashion with the two-piece mode extensively exploited in this fabric. Unlike the two-piece alpaca models are usually undorned except for decorations of the tailors variety.

Foreign influences that have come to stay include the Chinese or Mandarin effect, the Spanish shawl treatment of gowns for all occasions, and Balkan embroideries, which are always decorative.

Knife pleats are conspicuous in their absence, while "spring" and grouped pleatings are typical of the new season.

Creme satins have lost none of their popularity and are extensively represented in spring and southern collections.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of trouble and destroys the germs that lead to serious complications.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in treatment of chronic coughs and colds, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

Be Careful What You Wash Your Child's Hair With

If you want to keep children's hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisided coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Multisided coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last for months.

Test Yourself for Common Sense

Have you just plain common sense?

If you have, you should be able to answer these questions in one and a half minutes.

This is the way to do the test:

Four answers are given to each question. Make a cross to the right for the best answer. Have a friend tell you when to begin and when to stop. Do not read the questions until you are ready to begin the test. When he says "ready," go.

1. Why ought every man to be educated?

a. Because—
b. Because he was educated.
c. It makes a man more useful.
d. It costs money.

2. Why is leaf better food than cabbage? Because—
a. It is harder to obtain.
b. It tastes better.
c. It is more nourishing.

3. Why judge a man by what he does rather than by what he says? Because—
a. It is wrong to tell a lie.
b. What a man does shows what he really is.
c. It is wrong to judge anybody.

4. Why are warships painted gray? Because gray paint is—
a. Cheaper than any other color.
b. It is more durable than other colors.
c. Does not show dirt.

5. Why is agriculture valuable? Because—
a. It supplies luxuries.
b. It makes work for the unemployed.
c. The farmers feed the nation.

6. The great men are raised on farms.
How many are correct? Answer: 1, b, 2, c, 3, b, 4, d, 5, c.

Windmill of Montmartre Goes to Public Square

Paris—The above photograph shows the historical windmill of Montmartre—the Moulin de la Galette—which is to be moved from its original site, where it has been standing for several generations. It is one of the most historical of Paris landmarks. Its former owner, Miller Delavay, was killed defending the windmill against the invaders of Paris in 1814. The municipal council has voted a sum of money for the restoration of the old mill, which is to be placed in the public square at Montmartre.

Strawberries Headed Toward Race Suicide

Washington, D. C.—A deplorable state of affairs among strawberries has just been reported to the Agricultural department by the Vermont experimental station. It seems the strawberries have developed "degenerate forms of cultivation" and the "danger of race suicide is imminent."

An investigation was ordered by the Agricultural department and after a study of two years a voluminous report has been rendered.

"Crossing and re-crossing of varieties among strawberries has bred curious incompatibilities of temperament and resulted in an extraordinary miasma of sexes," says the report. "Deplorable conditions that have never been permitted to exist openly in the human social system have prevailed among strawberries ever since modern methods of cultivation have been in vogue."

"In significant contrast with the state of affairs among cultured strawberries in the United States are the stern simplicity and old-fashioned morality of the strawberries of South America, which is the native home of the genus. For at least 400 years or since the time of the Spanish explorer this noble band of berries has maintained its purity and its integrity."

Gamekeeper Kills Old Wolf Who Stole Lunch

Lenox, Mass.—Richard M. Davis, gamekeeper at the New Marlboro Game association preserves in southern Berkshire, recently shot a gray timber wolf which had killed his largest goose for a dinner. Two dead mallard ducks were close by.

Mr. Davis estimates that the wolf was forty years old, as its teeth were worn down smooth with the jaws. The fur is in good condition. The wolf put up a stiff fight before making a final leap to escape over a nine-foot fence.

This is the first wolf killed in the Berkshires since 1902. It is believed to be one of a pair that Corland Field Bishop saw in Sheffield last February and which later was seen by Ike Beck on Mount Washington.

Washington—Mints of the United States coined 254,277,250 pieces of United States new money of a value of $14,575,080 in 1923, the director of the mint reported recently. In addition the mints struck off 4,300,000 pieces for Peru.

Included in the United States coinage for 1923 were 2,208,250 gold double eagles, 56,631,000 silver dollars, 2,452,000 half dollars, 11,076,000 quarters, 56,729,000 dimes, 41,859,000 nickels and $3,423,000 pennies.

Unhappily Married Men's Club Formed

Paris.—The little town of Firminy, near St. Etienne, has the distinction of being the first community to organize an "Unhappily Married Men's Club."

The population of Firminy at the last census was 19,580, but when notices were posted in public places calling upon "every unhappily married man in town" to be present at a given place and a given date "in order to organize a club, nominate officers and arrange a banquet," nearly 200 men, ranging in age from twenty-five to seventy-five, responded.

The humorists of Paris aver that should a similar summons be made here the huge Velodrome would be too small to accommodate the crowd.

Weather Bureau Post on Brink of Volcano

A field of activity of the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture that is but little known is the volcano investigations conducted on the island of Hawaii under Dr. T. A. Jaggar, Jr. The permanent scientific staff consists of a volcanologist, a seismologist and a chemist.

Occasionally chemists, geologists, seismologists and physicists, both from the United States and from foreign countries, spend from a few weeks to several months at the volcano observatory, according to a Department of Agriculture bulletin.

The observatory is situated about 4,000 feet above sea level on the brink of Kilauea volcano, which is continually active, with a lake of molten lava. Studies are made not only of that volcano but also of Mauna Loa, nearly 10,000 feet higher, which erupts every five or six years. The eruptions of the two volcanoes are not explosive, but take the form of a rather quiet extrusion of molten lava.

The routine of the station consists in daily observation and photography of the fire pit, frequent surveys to determine the height of the lava, care of several seismographs and interpretation of seismograms. The seismographs give the distance and direction of earthquakes—five or six occur each week—and indicate the amount of tumescence or subsidence of the entire mountain top. From these seismographic data forecasts of volcanic activity from two or three hours to several days in advance are often made.

Machine That Plants 15,000 Trees a Day

Machines have been devised to do many things, but one of the most remarkable is used by the United States forest service, which sets out seedling trees ten times as fast as the old hand-planting method.

Its capacity is from 12,000 to 15,000 trees a day. It is an adaptation of a machine made to set out tomato and cabbage plants, and it takes three men and two horses to operate it at capacity.

In appearance the tree planter is something like a moving machine, says the London Tit-Bits. It has a plowshare arrangement in front, and at the back of the feeder are two metal wheels, which push earth around the tree seedling and pack it down. Two men seated beside the driver are kept busy placing the seedlings in the planting hopper.

Extra features of the tree planter include a marker that indicates where the next row is to go, and two hoppers containing water and fertilizer that drop the nutriment for the young trees around their roots just before the metal wheels fill in the furrow.

Hard to Surmount.

There are three difficulties in authorship: to write anything worth the publishing, to find honest men to publish it, and to get sensible men to read it.

Coon a Good Fighter

Frank Davis of Augusta was injured and four of the best trail hounds in a pack of 20 were killed in a battle with a raccoon, eight miles east of Latham, Kan. Davis and several other Augustans saw the coon in a large tree. Two of the men climbed the tree to punch the coon out of the branches. After a half hour's hard work in the tree 50 feet from the ground, the coon climbed down, closely followed by the men, who chased him over the Flint hills. He was captured by Bill Reetz and Davis, the latter receiving a painful wound on the left arm from the sharp teeth of the animal. While unloading him from a truck at Latham the coon escaped, making a clean getaway to the river. A pack of 20 coon hounds was put on his trail and followed by the men. The coon was finally captured a second time, during which Davis narrowly escaped with his life and four dogs were killed.—Topeka Capital.

Quake Aided Industries

Many Japanese industries which were running on a part-time basis prior to the earthquake have been stimulated to capacity production by the increased demand that has followed the earthquake. Cotton spinning and weaving mills, sawmills, galvanized sheet-iron plants, copper manufacturers, and breweries are all running at capacity whereas before the disaster many units of these industries were closed down altogether while others were running part time.

"Then what?" asked the doctor.

"Bring him two more," returned the job.—Naval Weekly.

DEATH WILL NOT STOP SUIT.

Unique Agreement Made by Defendant, Who Is 88 Years Old.

A stipulation has just been made in Justice A. H. Seeger's part of the Supreme Court by attorneys on both sides that a suit for $50,000 damages for alleged slander and libel should be tried even if Fielding Martin, aged defendant should die. Martin is 88 years old and the attorneys for the plaintiff refused to agree to a postponement of the suit until the April term unless the defendant agreed to the above stipulation. William Massonau of Red Hook, represented by Attorney Raymond Aldrich, alleges that Martin also of Red Hook, deceived him by untruths, alleged to have been both spoken and written.

YES OF INSECTS USED FOR LENSES

Any Marvels Are Revealed
at Meeting of Scientists.

A 100 candlepower incandescent lamp was lighted by power transmitted by radio at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Cincinnati recently, presided over by W. R. Whitney of the General Electric company.

An endless variety of subjects of scientific interest were presented. Included in the program was a photograph of a microscopic cell by a glass of infinitesimal fineness; a report of a female dove which was transformed into a male by natural causes; and the presentation of evidence that human beings had religious ideas roughly 100,000 years ago, and that they had been in the habit of holding them in future life.

Insect Eye Photography.

Water beetles, whose eyes each have about 4,000 lenses, are the best insect eye photography, according to W. F. Watson, who demonstrated a new method of research. The lenses occupy an area less than that of a pinhead, and only about one-tenth of this area is actually used in camera work. The picture is taken through about 400 lenses and then exposed by a microscope and thrown on the photographic plate by an ordinary camera lens.

Each of the 400 lenses makes a separate picture, so that the plates, 5 inches by 7, are covered by 400 miniature pictures of the thing photographed.

Dr. Clemenceau, Pasteur, and Allan Poe and others, and pictures of various insects, had been photographed in this way. Each face reproduced 400 times in regular rows, so that the developed photograph had a pattern like a sheet of postage stamps.

The eyes of the common house fly are good for photography, according to Dr. Watson. "I have used the eyes of hundreds of insects with varying success. The main purpose is not to take curious pictures, but to investigate the structure of the eyes. On account of many biologists have been sending me the lenses of the eyes of all kinds of insects. The procedure shows the marvelous structure of these minute structures, which 4,000 barely cover a pin point.

Sex Change Spontaneous.

The change of the dove from female to male was described by Dr. Osborn of the Cold Spring Harbor experiment station. While such changes have been made artificially by the transplantation of tissue, this is said to be the first case on record where a transformation occurred spontaneously.

The dove was a typical female and for a time, then it stopped eating and increased in weight to that of a male dove. Its color and habits changed to those of a male. It lived forty-four months after this change began. An autopsy showed that groups of cells had been destroyed by a tuberculous infection and had grown back or regenerated. Male cells had been destroyed and female cells regenerated.

The scientific interest and importance of this can hardly be exaggerated, said Dr. Riddle, "since the results clearly indicate that no bodily characteristics may be considered as irrevocably fixed and unchangeable. It, therefore, becomes probable that all hereditary characteristics of every organism are capable of being modified; and the accomplishment of such modification and control is a matter of merely a matter of the definite difference of investigators."

Dr. Hrdlicka, who has just returned from a prolonged study of the ruins of ancient man in Europe, said that central Europe was undoubtedly the cradle of the human race.

Immense populations of primitive men must have lived in various parts of Europe, and they can be traced back to the earliest known times, he said, showing constant evolution of Europe by men from first men to the present. The re-discovery of several varieties of ancient apes in the same region indicated that it was here that man emerged from some earlier form bearing a family resemblance to the early ape stock.

Contradicts Old Theory.

Interest in Dr. Hrdlicka's paper was increased by the fact that it contradicted the theory put forward by the American Museum of Natural History that central Asia was the cradle of the human race. The museum is sending an expedition there next year to prove it.

"The cradle of man," said Dr. Hrdlicka, "is not in some fabulous land in central Asia where nobody has found anything."

Of course, if you go back far enough," said he, "you can find a common ancestor for them both. You can trace their ancestry back to the reptile or if you go still further back, you can trace them both to a double reptile."

Use FREEMAN advertising regularly and conservatively and results will surely follow.

Dr. Hrdlicka dated the emergence of distinct human beings from the ancestral brute at 400,000 or 500,000 years ago. The anthropologists of the American museum use a figure three or four times as great.

Religion 100,000 Years Ago.

Dr. Hrdlicka offered evidence that man for possibly 100,000 years had definite religious ideas and conceived of a future life. His evidence was based on recent studies of Neanderthal skeletons which indicated that the limbs had been carefully composed and the bodies buried after a fixed plan and with some kind of ceremonies.

"This can mean nothing but that a belief in a future life was already in existence," he said.

The theory of evolution held out the promise that man, who had advanced from such a low state, would go higher and higher, and that it was something like a sacrifice on that account to deny evolution.

A microscopic naval battle, with chemical warfare and other novelties, was described by William F. Kepner and John F. Baker of the University of Virginia. The minute combatants were the microstoma and the hydra.

With his eye on the microscope the observer can see the formidable hydra rush through the water, intending to use its "stinging threads" on the microstoma, an extremely simple organism of inoffensive appearance. Just as the threads are about to inflict their fatal sting the microstoma releases from its mouth a chemical which paralyzes the hydra. Science wins over brute force. The tiny microstoma slowly stuffs into its rudimentary stomach the body of the paralyzed hydra, but makes no attempt to swallow the deadly filaments.

"The stinging threads," say the authors, "lie about in an aimless manner. But eventually free moving cells of the microstoma's body carry these stinging threads over the surface of the microstoma."

The most remarkable fact is, however, that now the microstoma actually uses these threads that it has obtained from the hydra. It has eaten to sting and locally paralyze other animals.

Plants Make Own Light.

Prof. Francis E. Lloyd of McGill university told of algae and other minute plants which took ordinary light and manufactured brilliant and vivid lights of their own. Under the microscope he showed specks of plant life which glowed like stained glass of fiery hues—deep red, orange, yellow and green. The light which entered the seemingly transparent cells was totally transformed. Its wave length was shortened and its color changed by the process known as fluorescence.

This is not a parlor trick, but a new method of reading secrets of life and growth of plants. The process of transforming light is closely connected with the production of the plant's food. When it is known how the plants produce new light, it will probably be known how they take carbon, their chief foodstuff, from the air. According to many scientists, the most important of all problems is to find out how plants capture carbon and to imitate it, so that man may control directly the apparatus of taking the all powerful energy of carbon from the atmosphere.

Landlord Faints When Books Are Demanded

New York—When Abraham Levy heard that the books of J. H. Levy & Sons, Inc., 100 West One Hundred and Twenty Street, of which he is secretary, were to be impounded by the city court and examined to find the extent of his profits on real estate transactions he fainted and was carried from the witness chair in city court. He was revived in an adjoining room.

Levy admitted he operated in purchasing apartment house leases on long terms and subletting at a profit. Levy did not relish his cross-examination, and when it was over he withdrew his counter claim against the plaintiffs, Blauher Bros., who are suing for overdue rent, and accepted the judgment of the court against him for $670.66.

Isidore Gainsburg, for the plaintiffs, refused to let the case drop, however, and asked Justice La Fetra to have the books of the company impounded. At this point Levy fainted over.

New Device to Measure Speed of Projectiles

A new instrument to measure the speed of a projectile as it passes through the barrel of a gun has been devised by the bureau of standards at Washington. The movement of a projectile through a gun barrel with its following charge of gas from burning powder, experts found, causes an infinitesimal expansion followed instantaneously by contraction. The minute ripple thus produced is recorded electrically by the new device, which is expected to be of great value in working out improvements in guns, projectiles and explosives.

250,000 Feet of Lumber in Giant California Tree

A mammoth redwood, measuring 25 feet across the butt and 70 feet in circumference, was cut recently in the redwood forest near Crescent City, Cal., on the redwood highway. The tree was 300 feet tall. It will furnish 250,000 feet of lumber. It is pointed out that 50 cottages, each containing 5,000 feet of lumber, could be erected from the lumber cut from this single tree.

When AMERICA WAS YOUNG

Take your Mother, Sister, Sweetheart, Wife to see this delightful picture-play.. They'll love every minute of it.

Maybe you've seen a funnier episode on the screen than the prize fight in "Little Old New York" but we doubt it. It's the most side-splitting bit ever filmed.

Fire breaks out in the middle of the boxing bout. At least, the fire bell is rung and then comes thrills.

The first trip of Robert Fulton's folly, "The Clermont" is a great moment in the film. The inventor of the steamboat proved to the world the kind of stuff young America was made of.

Marion Davies is positively ravishing as the heroine of this sweet love story. Her performance stands out among the screen characterizations that you want to treasure forever.

The brave old days live gloriously again on the screen in this utterly charming, delightfully thrilling story of America's youth. We can be proud of those handsome gentlemen and fair ladies who laid the foundations of this great nation. Their story, their loves, their trials, have been told in one of the most remarkable motion pictures of photoplay history. Marion Davies by her quaint and whimsical performance will win our heart completely.

London's Flags at Half Mast

For Woodrow Wilson—Tributes From All Shades of Political Opinion Point Out His High Idealism.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Feb. 4.—Throughout London American flags today floated at half mast in tribute to the memory of the late Woodrow Wilson.

Men prominent in every walk of life united in praising the achievements and ideals of the dead American statesman.

"He was a great man in every test," said former Premier David Lloyd-George. "His life and death constitute one of those tragedies associated with great ideals which make men immortal. His name will endure forevermore."

It is probable that American organizations in London will unite in conducting memorial services.

Dispatches from Washington announcing Mr. Wilson's death were conspicuously displayed on the first pages of newspapers and all commented upon the greatness of the former president. For the most part the press predicted that only the future can estimate the greatness of the late statesman.

Frank B. Kellogg, the American ambassador, commented:

"It was with deep sorrow that I heard of former President Wilson's death. Though many differed from him, all unite in honoring his high ideals."

"We think of ex-President Wilson as a statesman of great character—in some respects far in advance of his time," said Canon Alexander.

Charles George Ammon, parliamentary secretary to the Admiralty, commented:

"He gave expression to great ideas, and ideals in the long run, are the only real things in the world."

The Times said:

"With all his faults he, (Mr. Wilson) was a great American who played for a brief space a greater part in world affairs than any of his predecessors. He was a famous professor of politics who, for awhile, had the world for his class room."

"A great spirit has passed from the earth," wrote A. G. Gardiner, former editor of the Daily News. "If his failure in the smaller arts of manipulating men contributed to his defeat at home, so has his innocence of the world contributed to his defeat in Europe. He found himself in a thieves' kitchen enmeshed in the subtle arts of European diplomacy of which he did not know the alphabet. I believe the future will acclaim him a seer whom his time and country rejected to the lasting sorrow of the world."

Financial and Commercial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Feb. 4.—The stock market was steady at the opening today. Buying of railroad shares featured the early trading.

Steadiness prevailed in the foreign trading. Heavy buying of rail shares was the feature. The industrial list was steady with the exception of a few miscellaneous issues, which were heavy, such as American Can which lost 1 1/2 to 120 and Davison Chemical about 2 points to 48 1/2. The main body of stocks moved within a narrow range. Oils were strong as the result of additional crude oil advances.

"EIGHMEY'S STORE"

For over twenty-six years "Eighmey's" has been a household word representing the best in merchandise at the lowest possible price. Mr. S. E. Eighmey, the founder, started this business in the small store at No. 19 Broadway which because of the rapid growth of the business through earnest, honest effort and fair dealing, soon became too small, when the present building was secured.

It is now necessary to convert this great stock of high grade merchandise into cash. The many friends who have helped build up this business by their patronage will have an exceptional opportunity to secure needed dry goods at unheard of prices.

Sincerity.
To every poet, to every writer, we might say: Be true, if you would be believed. Let a man but speak forth with genuine earnestness the thought, the emotion, the actual condition of his own heart; and other men, so strangely are we all knit together by the tie of sympathy, must and will give heed to him. In culture, in extent of view, we may stand above the speaker, or below him; but in either case, his words, if they are earnest and sincere, will find some response within us; for in spite of all casual varieties in outward rank or inward as face answers to face, so does the heart of man to man.—Thomas Carlyle.

Real Pleasure in Life.
The truest pleasure comes from simple things. The art of living is mainly the art of enjoyment. It is no use being a millionaire and able to own palaces if one has lost all pleasure except that of adding to one's millions.
